

Special-purpose machines

Special-purpose machines from schmale Maschinenbau can intelligently combine a wide range of technologies. The machine shown above is used to produce double-headed anchors for the construction industry.

We also design and build special machines for the production of particularly long screws or special chains.

Individual combinations of servo-electric units such as bending slides, presses or finger benders create tailor-made solutions. Often, these highly customised items cannot be produced on any of the standard machines available on the market.

schmale offers special-purpose machines for processing wire, tube and strip.

Do you have any existing products or enquiries for products that are not practical or are even impossible to manufacture on one of your series or standard machines?

We have decades of experience in designing and building special-purpose machines.

Research and development play a key role at our company.

Talk to us about the product you want to manufacture and we will design the right special-purpose machine for you.

In a spirit of fairness and partnership.

The intelligent combination of technologies can result in a special-purpose machine.

Our concepts are as individual as the product you want to manufacture.
